

Our July the Fourth

We are at the beach vacationing right now! All my babies are asleep and so is my sweet husband so I thought I would catch up on the blog!

Our holiday was filled with a little bit of cleaning, a little packing and some swimming. I'm so OCD, as you probably know by now, so I have to have my house spic and span before leaving for a vacation. We were able to get the car packed and house clean while the babies napped. We weren't completely sure if we were going to leave that night because Matt had to make sure he was going to be off work the next day. He never knows what time he has to be at work until 7 at night. So to waste some time we spent the day swimming at Matts moms house. The babies had fun! It was a VERY and unusually cool but they were able to swim for a little while! Here are a few pics from our day..

How cute are their outfits?! My wonderful friend Michelle Wearsh made them for me! She has started up a new company called Pippis Treasures and I'm so excited for her! I have a post coming up about just her business but in the mean time click and check out her shop!!

The babies got pretty tired pretty quick so we left there and went home. We found out Matt was going to be off that next day on our way home. We got home and bathed the babies, gave bottles, put in pjs and tucked them all in their car seats. We were beach bound around 8:20 and arrived here around 1:30 a.m. Jocelynn cried almost the entire way which was not fun but we managed. She's been having a rough time sleeping ever since we left home. I hope her ears aren't infected and that its just teething and the fact that there's just too much going on around her.

We've been having so much fun and have had some really pretty days!! I cant wait to share with you all about our beach trip and all of the beautiful pictures of the babies! I hope you all had a wonderful Fourth of July!